rienced Machinists Testify The Exon-eration of all Parties at the Works-Verdict of the Jury, &c.

The jury empanelled in the case of Frederick Barton to investigate the causes which led to his death at the Phœnix Iron Works, on the boiler to any one of the employers of the works.

Wm. McLeish, machinist at the works, testified that he was injured by the explosion, but did not hear it, as he thinks he was instantaneously struck. Was working on the lower floor of the machine shop, on the east side of the building, near the centre. Never has seen deceased at work around the boiler at any time. The apprentices run the engine in the machine shop and fire up under the boiler, taking their turns at it. Deponent has been employed in the machine shop of the works about five years; did not, at any time on that morning, hear the boiler that exploded blow of steam; thinks he would have heard it if thad blown off; never has heard any of the employees say that they had refused to work around that boiler because it was dangerous; believed the boiler to be perfectly safe; served his time at the Phoenix Iron Works as an apprentice, learning the trade of machinist; an apprentice, learning the trade of machinist, when an apprentice was compelled to fire unwhen an apprentice was compelled to fire under the boiler.

George Bennett, laborer at the works, testified that he was sent by M. Kelly, foreman of machine shop, to fire under the boiler that exploded, a little after seven o'clock on that morning. Deponent went to work 'cleaning out and built the fire. Worked at the boiler about an hour. Had other work to do, and went about it. Knows nothing about the explosion. Never told Mr. Kelly that the boiler was dangerous. Knows nothing about a boiler. Never told any person that he had told Mr. Kelly so. Never was told by Mr. Kelly to do anything around the boiler that he (deponent) refused or falled to do. Not long before the explosion, saw deceased put a plank against the boiler. Did not see the deceased get upon the shavings. Pine wood was used under the boiler.

under the boiler.

E. E. Hughes, United States steamboat inspector, testified that he had seen the boiler at the Phoenix Iron Works. It was a properly spector, testified that he had seen the boller at the Phoenix Iron Works. It was a properly constructed boiler, and deponent believes of good iron. Saw it about a week before the explosion, and made a casual examination of it. Did not examine any of the combinations, water or evesm. Has examined the boiler since the explosion. Has made a careful examination of the fragments of the exploded boiler. Found the iron good, of sufficient thickness, and thinks it ought to have been safe at a hundred pounds. Did not examine the connections, or inquire about them. Examified the safety valve and found it in good order. Made the examination a short time after the explosion. Believes the explosion to have been caused by an excessive pressure of steam. Thinks there must have been far over a hundred pounds pressure. Could not see any appearance of any corrosion on the safety valve had been in proper working order and placed at seventy-five pounds, when there was that pressure the valve would have raised up and let the surplus steam escape, unless the over pressure was caused by some sudden and unknown cause. The only cases of such a nature that deponent has traced have been from letting the water in the boiler get too low. By opening the valve to start the engine, if the water is too low, the water will raise suddenly on the tron that has been heated and cause an explosion. Did not form any distinct oplinion as to the direct cause of the explosion. the iron that has been heated and cause an explosion. Did not form any distinct opinion as to the direct cause of the explosion. Does not believe the explosion would have occurred if the safety valve was in proper order, water properly attended and the boiler in charge of a competent person. Never have seen blue steam come from a boiler. Would consider a boiler in that condition dangerous. When blue steam comes from a boiler it is evidence that there is not enough water in the boiler. Consteam comes from a boiler it is evidence that there is not enough water in the boiler. Considers a boy of fitteen years competent to fire under a boiler. Does not believe that a man acting as foreman of the machine shop of the Phœnix Iron Works can pay the necessary attention to the boiler and engine. Would not consider it safe to leave a boy of fitteen years to fire under a boiler like that exploded, and a person engaged as foreman of the machine shop the only person to look out for the engine and the steam; the time of the foreman is taken away so much that he cannot pay the proper attention; the boy would be too young and inexperienced; if the foreman would make periodical visits of thirly minutes, it would be sufficient; would be inclined to think that there was a sufficiency of water, and that the safety valve had been over-loaded or jammed in its seat.

ed or jammed in its seat.

Julia Bennett testified that she conversed with Mrs. Jane Barton in reference to the ex-plosion of the boller, on Saturday last. Depo-nent does not remember telling Mrs. Barton that her husband had refused to work the that her husband had refused to work the boiler because it was dangerous.

A. Cameron, machinist, testified that he saw the exploded boiler of the Phœnix Iron Works a month or six weeks before the explosion. Made a casual examination of it. Thought it a properly made boiler. Saw nothing wrong about it. Did not examine the connections. a properly made boiler. Saw nothing wrong about it. Did not examine the connections. A short time after the explosion, examined the pieces of the exploded belier. The iron was of apparently good material. Did not see anything that would indicate the cause of the explosion. Did not examine the safety valve or the steam gauge. Believes that the boiler ought to be safe at one hundred pounds of steam. The only opinion that deponent has formed in regard to the explosion is that it resulted from a scarcity of water or an over pressure of steam. If the safety valve was set at seventy-five pounds, in proper working order and steam. If the safety valve was set at seventyfive pounds, in proper working order and plenty of water in the boiler, deponent thinks the boiler could not have exploded. Apparently there was plenty of water in the boiler at the time of the explosion. Sees no reason why the foreman of the machine shop cannot pay proper attention to the boiler and engine.
Does not believe the boiler could have generaled fifty pounds of steam in three minutes, unless the water got low, and from some cause washed up on the heated iron, when it would probably do so. When deponent was carrying on business of the same kind, it was customary for apprentices to fire up, under the supervision of the foreman.

A. D. McLeish, apprentice at the works, testified that he was firing up the day before the explosion on the boiler that exploded.
Has been frequently set at work firing up.

the explosion on the boiler that exploded. Has been frequently set at work firing up. Was never set at work with deceased firing up. It was the custom of the foreman to come frequently and see if everything was right about the engine and boiler. There was no time while deponent was firing that the foreman left him to take charge of the boiler and engine alone. John H. Early, an apprentice, was left at one time in charge about two or three hours. Does not know if deceased was ever so left. Heard the boiler blowing off steam about a quarter of an hour before the ever so left. Heard the boller blowing the steam about a quarter of an hour before the explosion. Looked at it at that time and saw it. Is positive it was the exploded one. Have seen seventy-five pounds of steam on the boller. Cannot tell the exact time he saw the boiler blowing off.

Dennis Murray, bollermaker at the works, teatified that he knew nothing of the explosion. Was in the boiler shop at the time. Never called Mr. Kelly's attention to anything being wrong about the boiler that exploded. Never saw anything wrong about the boiler or any blue steam coming from it. Never called Mr. Kelly to have any talk with him that morning, and never told any one that he did so or that he had any talk with him whatever.

The intra bare took a recess but renewed

The jury here took a recess, but renewed their investigations at four o'clock in the afternoon, as follows: afternoon, as follows:

R. I. S. Ellsworth, apprentice at the works learning the trade of a machinist, testified that he had often been set at work firling under the boiler. Sometimes two of the apprentices and at other times one would be so employed. Mr. Kelly always visited them while firing. Never was left alone to look after the boiler. Never was left alone to look after the boiler. Never was left any length of time alone, and never more than a quarter of an hour. Knows

THE BARTON INQUEST CONCLUDED. apprentices staying at home because they were afraid to fire up under the boiler. Never did so himself. Mr. Kelly always kept a close watch on the apprentices while firing under the boilers. Was not at the shop on the morning of the explosion.

E. M. Troth, recalled, testified that he saw the steam escaping from the safety-valve of the boiler that exploded a few minutes before the explosion took place, and is satisfied the safety-valve was in proper working order. The boiler was supplied with water hotter than that in the boiler. Never used cold water for that in the boiler. Never used cold water for led to his death at the Phœnix Iron Works, on Friday morning last, assembled yesterday, pursuant to adjournment, at the office of the Coroner, in the Conrthouse. The following is a summary of the facts testified to by the several witnesses:

Jane Barton testified that the deceased was her son and had been employed for eight months at the works learning the trade of a finisher. Deceased told deponent on several occasions that he was not kept at his trade, but went on errands and was made to act as fireman. Deceased complained twice about the blue steam coming from the boiler, and said that it was dangerous. Deceased told deponent on last Saturday that he was one of the apprentices at the Phœnix Iron Works, and that he had stayed at home for a week, because he boiler twolld explode. Deceased did not say that the had reported blue steam coming from the boiler to any one of the employers of the works.

worked well. Coroner Taft now asked if the jury desired any further testimony upon any point, or knew of any testimony that would throw light upon the case. The jury expressed themselves satisfied with the testimony adduced, and having retired for a few minutes, returned a verdict that "the deceased, Frederick Barton, came to his death on the 22d of March, A. Wm. Morris, lodged for getting drunk and abusing and assaulting the police in the Guardhouse, was fined five dollars with an alternative of twenty days in the House of Correction. PURSUING THE THIEVES .- Yesterday morning an indignant party of colored people from Noisette's tarm made their appearance at the Guardhouse, and called for Rodger Green, Tony Ladson and Frank Nelson, the three colored lads who were arrested on the charge of stealing and selling ducks. The party had identified the ducks, and speedily recognized the three culprits as certain lost sheep who had left the Noisette settlement with the webfooted prizes. The prisoners were turned over to Trial Justice Levy, pleaded guilty at once to the duck-stealing, and were tent to jail for thirty days, much to the satisfaction of of no complaint among the apprentices about firing up under the boiler. and threatening weather, until Saturday, at 9.30 A. M. The sales of real estate by Lowndes & Grimball and H. H. DeLeon, which were to have taken place yesterday morning at auction, was postponed on account of the weather. The steamship George W. Clyde, from this port on last Saturday afternoon, arrived at her wharf in Philadelphia, after a sixty hours' passage, early on Tuesday morning. Her machinery worked very successfully on a consumption of about eight tons of coal per twenty-four hours. "HECTOR, SWIFT OF FOOT."-Yesterday morning, Hector Gardiner, the colored youth who gave a trial justice's constable the slip on Tuesday last, was captured at one of his lurking places in St. Philip street by the detectives. He enjoys the reputation of being the fastest runner, the highest jumper and the most extensive poultry thief in the county. Hector has been several times in the clutches of the officers of the law, but has each time escaped by the exercise of his peculiar coolness, agillty and the quickness with which he seizes upon a chance of getting away. He was turned over to a trial justice for examination, charged with 'the depletion of a number of henroosts in various parts of the city. PEOPLE'S SAVINGS INSTITUTION.

"Internally, I gave quinine and iron and a good nourishing diet. Still I found great trouble in keeping up healthy granulations, they would become sluggish. I tried a number of alteratives, as lodded of potassium and lime, Still the case progressed very slowly until my attention was attracted to an article in the Medical and Surgical Reporter, 'On Iodoform and Iron.' I at one concluded to give this remedy a fair trial. I discontinued all other constitutional treatment, and gave three pills three times a day, manufactured by W. R. WARNER & Co., of Philadelphia. I soon had the satisfaction of seeing a rapid improvement. The pain at once left her limb, with which she had suffered continually; the granulations became more healthy and more abundant, and I now have the satisfaction of seeing my patient engaging in all her household duties. Not a vestige of the disease is to be seen. The patient is enjoying perfect health, is active and lively.

"Since, I have treated two other cases, one of three and one of four years standing, with the same good result. I feel convinced of the efficacy of the remedy.
